VOL. XXXVII BELLEFONTE, PA., THURSDAY MORNING, JULY 7, 1904. NO. 23

PARKER FOR PRESIDENT

Indications Point to His Nomination.

BY THE DEMOCRATS

In Their National Convention at St. Louis—It Will Probably Occur. on the First or Second Ballot.

PENNSYLVANIA LEADS THE WAY.

St. Louis, July 6.—Parker's strong position remains unshaken. The opposition has made many assaults during the day but has apparently made no impression. The solid and substantial phalanx of the New York jurist has withstood all efforts of the friends of other candidates and Tuesday night was apparently stronger than ever. Assurances of accessions from instructed delegations after the first ballot have been received from men who are tired to other candidates, which the Parker adherents say insures a nomination by the second ballot.

All day long the anti-Parker men have tried to offer a candidate who would unite a third of the delegates so as to have a rallying point when complimentary ballots have been cast for favorite sons. The possibility of uniting has been made manifest and the most zealous opponents of Parker concede his probable nomination not later than the second ballot.

The Parker opposition was disturbed, but not routed, by the action of Pennsylvania Monday night. The sixty-eight votes of that state have been placed in the Parker column and are a part of the 500 odd votes that have been claimed for him. They were not instructed, however and if they could have been secured for any other candidate it would have been a serious blow to the Parker interest.

Criticism of the action of Pennsylvania has been free and harsh among some of the anti-Parker men, but others say that a proposition made by one of the Pennsylvania leaders is quite fair. It is stated that after the action of the Pennsylvania delegation Monday night a member of the delegates held a conference with some of the anti-Parker leaders and said that Pennsylvania, notwithstanding the endorsement of Parker, would give sixty-eight votes to any eastern candidate, with the exception of Hearst, upon whom the opposition could concentrate with enough pledged votes, which, together with the sixty-eight votes, of Pennsylvania, would make two votes more than one-third of the convention. Among the candidates named who would be satisfactory were Pattison, of Pennsylvania; Gorman, of Maryland; Gray, of Deleware; Harmon, of Ohio; Olney, of Massachusetts, and Coler, of New York.

Upon this proposition some of the anti-Parker men have been working, but they have not been meeting with much success. Cohesion of the anti-Parker men is apparently impossible.

Young Lady Fined for Shooting Robins.

Miss Sarah Glosser, of Linden was fined $30 and costs for having killed several robins and catbirds. The costs amounted to $30.29, and the entire bill was paid by her father. Miss Glosser is a crack shot and she pleaded guilty to killing three birds. It is alleged that two of the robins killed were parents of one or two young birds that were unable to leave the nest. The act was brought by Game Warden Kalbfus and his deputy, Joseph Berrier, and Alderman Kellenbach imposed the fine.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.

How the Day Was Observed at Hecla Park and Other Places.

The Fourth of July in Bellefonte was one of the quietest in the history of the town as there was practically nothing doing. The major portion of the population hied themselves either to Hecla Park, Hunter's Park, State College or some other place there to enjoy the day while many stayed quietly at home. There was a Sabbath stillness prevailing in town during the afternoon but in the evening there were many brilliant displays of fire works by private citizens.

The big picnic at Hecla Park under the auspices of the Undine Fire Company passed off very nicely and a careful estimate of the crowd in attendance places it at 6,000. The railroad facilities were taxed to their uttermost but everything passed off nicely and without accident. The days pleasures include band concerts, dancing, base ball and bird shooting. In the morning the Undine and Logan Fire Companies played a five inning game of base ball which the Undines won by the score of 11 to 7.

In the afternoon an exciting game of base ball was played between the Bellefonte Athletic Club and the Hecla Park team which the former won by the score of 5 to 4.

Band concerts were given by the Milesburg and Zion bands and Christy Smith's orchestra furnished the music for dancing.

In the evening to close the day's pleasure there was a brilliant display of fireworks.

We must compliment the Undine boys on the splendid order which prevailed all day. There was not a single disturbance to mar the occasion and very few drunks were noticeable.

The committee in charge was composed of Jacob Knisely, chairman; Harry Walkey, George Hart, Ferd Beezer and Charles Anderson.

THE FOURTH AT STATE COLLEGE.

The Alpha Fire Company at State College held a big celebration. There was a big fantastic parade during the day and a festival and brilliant display of fire works at night. The town was full of visitors, several bands were present and fun galore.

Fears That Peach Crop Will Die Out.

The peach crop in Pennsylvania will amount to practically nothing this year, and there is a strong prospect of peach culture dying out entirely in this state, according to a statement made by State Economic Zoologist H. A. Surface who is probably better posted than any other person, upon the condition of Pennsylvania fruit trees.

Prof. Surface has visited many parts of the state and is in constant communication with fruit growers, and he pronounces their reports regarding the fruit crop discouraging.

The remarkable increase of the San Jose scale, the Chinese insect which feeds on fruit trees, which was imported to this country only during the past decade, is principally responsible for the prevailing conditions, though the hard winter just past is also blamable to some extent.

"Unless peach growers take more active steps toward destroying the San Jose scale during the coming year it will be practically impossible to raise peaches in Pennsylvania," says Professor Surface. "The only orchards in the state that will amount to anything this year are those of a few expert growers who have taken due precautions against the pests.

"Because of the severe winter many of the twigs of peach trees were frost bitten just about the places where the blossoms should grow, but the greatest loss by far will be due to the scale."

Professor Surface daily receives sample twigs from orchards of state peach growers which are literally covered with the destroying scale, which seems to be becoming constantly more numerous.

Death of Isaac Merryman.

Isaac Merryman, a life long resident of Pine Grove Mills, died at his home in that place last Friday evening at 7 o'clock at the ripe old age of 80 years. His death was due to infirmities incident to old age and after an illness of one month.

He served in a cavalry command during the latter part of the war.

He is survived by two neices and a nephew and was buried beside his father and mother in the new cemetery at Pine Grove Mills Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock He was a member of the Lutheran church and Rev. C. T. Aiken, assisted by Rev. Dunlap officiated at the funeral.

SON FAINTED MOTHER KILLED!

Mrs. Josiah Jackson of State College Victim of Runaway Accident.

THREE OTHERS INJURED

Dead Woman's Skull Was Fractured by Striking the Stump of a Small Tree—She Was the Mother of Prof. J. Price Jackson.

SHE LIVED ONLY A SHORT TIME.

MADISON, WIS., July 5.—Mrs. Josiah Jackson of State College, Pa., the aged mother of Prof. Dugald G. Jackson, of the Wisconsin university, was killed while out riding with her sister and her son and his family on the Lake Mendota drive Friday evening. Prof. Jackson, who was driving, fainted while trying to turn around on a hillside and the team ran away, throwing the six occupants of the carriage heavily to the ground.

The dead woman suffered a fracture of the skull by striking the sharp stump of a small tree and lived only a short time after the accident. Prof. Jackson sustained a fracture of one of his arms. His 11-year-old daughter had her collar bone broken and Mrs. Erastus Milo Cravath, of Nashville, Tenn., widow of a former president of Fisk university and a sister of the dead woman, sustained a compound fracture of one of her arms.

The dead woman made her home at State College, Pa., with her son, Prof. J. P. Jackson, of the faculty of State College. Mrs. Jackson had been here visiting her sons for several weeks, and was preparing to return to State College in a few days. She was 60 years old. The body was taken East Saturday for burial.

AN EDITORS TROUBLE.

Threatened With a Libel Suit by an Unknown Friend of Dominico Constance.

Wednesday evening ye editor received two letters in the same mail purporting to be from different parties but in reality written by the same person, as the handwriting was exactly alike, in which the editor was threatened with a libel suit if he did not retract certain statements made in the paper in regard to Dominic Constance, the young Italian now languishing in jail charged with incendiarism. The letters are written in a woman's hand and are both anonymous. Now it is not the custom of newspapers to publish letters where the name of the writer is withheld but we will deviate from the rule this time and give you one of them just as a sample: The letter is as follows:

Bellefonte, Pa., 6-28-04.

MR. EARL TOOTON,
Editor,-"BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN,"
Bellefonte, Pa.

Sir:—

Notwithstanding the fact that I have no particular interest in the man by the name of "Domenico Costanto" an Italian at present confined in the jail at this place, I wish to save you and your reporter from further trouble and consequently ask you to refute the reports printed and circulated in the last edition of the "Republican."

I will not dictate what you must print but as the writer was present during the interview and heard every word spoken by Domenico and your incapable reporter will at present await the rectification, trusting that it will cover all falseties.

As for the assertion that "Domenico" was sentenced for seven months for shooting a Mr. Rothrock is an untruth, as he (Domenico) was acquitted on said charge and was given the five months (not seven) for carrying a concealed revolver. In reguard to his temporary insanity and assulting his cell-mate, there is not a particle of truth in the report and wish the same refuted through your paper, or there will surely be a case of libel in the near future. Trusting that you will rectify all errors in your next edition of the "Republican." I remain, signing myself.

A LOVER OF FAIR PLAY.

If the parties who wrote the above will come forward, reveal his or her identity and point out misstatements then we will gladly make any corrections that we deem proper.

DEATH OF J. H. REIFSNYDER.

Prominent Citizen of Penns Valley Passes Away.

J. H. Reifsnyder, of Millheim, one of Centre county's best known citizens died at his home in that place Friday afternoon, as a result of a stroke of apoplexy, which he suffered while on a business trip to Lock Haven. The funeral took place Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock.

John H. Reifsnyder was born near Annville, Lebanon county, Pa., July 18, 1837, and his family which is of German origin has been represented in this state for several centuries His father Wm. Reifsnyder located at Aaronsburg, Centre county in 1841. The deceased received his early education in the public schools at Aaronsburg When a young man he followed the butchering trade, taught school, later learned surveying served several terms as County Surveyor Other business enterprises in which he engaged were as treasurer of the Millheim Building and Loan Association; an incorporator of the Millheim Turnpike road from tha place to Coburn. In January 1861, Mr. Reifsnyder was married to Mary L. Kreamer, of Miles township who died July 23, 1892. Two children survive this union, Jennie K. and Joseph W., both of Millheim. Later he married Mrs. Mary Woodling of Rebersburg who survives him with one son.

Mr. Reifsnyder was a staunch Democrat. From 1862 to 1866 he was tax collecter of Penn township. In the fall of 1869 he was elected Justice of the Peace and served continuously until 1896 giving perfect satisfaction. He also served seven terms as County Surveyor.

He owned a great deal of valuable property in and about Millheim and was a self made man in the fullest sense, his intellect and his attainments being remarkable. His sound clear judgment of men and affairs made his opinions valued and his advice eagerly sought.

Joseph Furey's Daughter Weds.

A very pretty home wedding occurred Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Furey at Lock Haven when their daughter Kathryn became the bride of Wm. Mitchell, of Elmira, N. Y. There were no wedding invitations issued, it being Miss Furey's intention to be married in the presence of members of the two families only, but the members of the I. C. club decided not to be thus balked and they extended to one another an invitation to be present and witness the ceremony which was to join in wedlock one of their own number.

Promptly at 6 o'clock the young couple stepped into the parlor, the bride dressed in her traveling suit including hat, and taking their places in the large bay window, Rev. Jesse R. Zeigler, pastor of the Great Island Presbyterian church, pronounced the words that made them man and wife Congratulations over, light refreshments were served, when a short time was spent in looking at the presents received, which were many and useful. The groom's present to the bride was a brooch set with pearls and diamonds.

Later the bride and groom stepped into a cab to be driven to the N. Y. C. railroad station at Castenea, when to their surprise another carriage quickly drove up and eleven of the I. C's. leaped in and directed the driver to follow the cab containing the bridal pair. when cow-bells, sleigh-bells and horns announced to the public that another wedding had occured. The young couple went to Williamsport Wednesday evening and Thursday morning left for Baltimore, Washington and Atlantic City, returning to Lock Haven in about a week. The bride is the eldest daughter of the venerable J. W. Furey, formerly local editor of the Watchman, and for the past few years, she has been typewriter and stenograper for George A. Brown, Esq., of Lock Haven, and the groom is manager of a telephone company in the city of Elmira, where the young couple will reside.

Toy Pistol Victims Increasing.

Bernard Shill, aged 13 years, is dead at his home in Columbia, a victim of the toy pistol. A week ago the boy shot himself in the hand accidentally, the wad of the blank cartridge inflicting a slight wound. Home remedies were applied but the wound became very sore. Thursday lockjaw developed and the little fellow died in awful agony.

IMPORTANT BUSINESS MOVE

Gamble, Gheen & Co. of Jersey Shore Succeed

C. T. GERBERICH & SON

The New Firm Took Charge July 1st and are Making Improvements—Mr. Gamble is In Charge.

MR. GERBERICH'S ACTIVE LIFE.

An important business change took place Friday when the milling business of C. T. Gerberich & Son passed into the hands of Gamble, Gheen & Spigelmyer, of Jersey Shore. The new firm name will be Gamble, Gheen & Co., the members of the firm being G. M. Gamble, W. E. Gheen and Shem Spigelmyer, the latter being quite well known here having been associated with Ralph Spigelmyer in the Racket store. All are hustling, energetic business men and we bespeak for the new firm a successful career.

About one year ago they purchased from F. W. Crider what is known as the Hale property, including the big brick mill, lumber yard, water power, ground and building over the race now occupied by Platt Barber & Co., and Shirt factory. Mr. Gamble is a practical business man, a miller of years experience and a fine gentleman personally. He will have entire charge of the business. He has moved to Bellefonte with his family and occupies a residence two doors south of the Episcopal church. Mr. Gamble is having the mill and business block repainted and is making other improvements, Miss Mary Junod, of Jersey Shore, a neice of Mr. Gamble, will make her home with the family and keep books for the new firm.

Mr. C. T. Gerberich who retires from active business life leaves an honorable record behind him.

Fifty years ago Mr. Gerberich learned the trade in the old stone mill that stood there prior to the fire. He was an apprentice to John and Jacob Wagner who at that time were the proprietors. He left the town soon after he learned the trade, but on October 20, 1864, he returned and went into partnership with J. M. Wagner of Bellefonte and G. W. Scholl now of Houserville. At that time the firm was known as J. M. Wagner & Co. In the fall of 1874 the property was purchased by Dr. E. W. Hale and the late William P. Duncan. The firm was then changed to Duncan, Hale & Co., the Co., being Mr. Gerberich. In 1882 Mr. Duncan retired and the firm's name was changed to Gerberich, Hale & Co. In 1898 the plant was sold to F. W. Crider when C. T. Gerberich leased the mill and operated it under the firm name of C. T. Gerberich & Son.

Mr. Gerberich is one of our best citizens. He was a member of council for several years serving as President of that body one or two terms. As a business man he is the soul of honor. We hope he may live many years to enjoy the prosperity he has justly earned.

Death of Mrs. Daniel McClellan.

Mrs. Sarah E., wife of Daniel W. McClellan, died Wednesday morning at the home of Geo. Mayes on North Tenth street, Philipsburg the result of heart trouble, dropsy and consumption. The family had only recently moved from Philipsburg to Hawk Run, and one week ago they concluded to go to Milesburg and Snow Shoe on a visit. Reaching Philipsburg she was taken ill, and was kindly invited to the home of Mrs. Mayes, where she received the very best attention up to the time of her death.

The deceased was born at Snow Shoe, and had she lived until the 23rd of August next, would have completed her 29th year. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lorrah, of Snow Shoe, and was married to Mr. McClellan about nine years ago. Besides her husband, she leavee four children, the oldest seven years and the youngest nine months. Her parents and three brothers and five sisters also survive. She died in the triumphs of the christian faith. She was a devoted wife and mother and a kind neighbor. A brief service was held at the home where she died at 4 o'clock Wednesday, and the body taken on the 5:32 train to Snow Shoe for burial.

—No need to fear sudden attacks of cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea, or summer complaint, if you have Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in the medicine chest.

HISTORIC MARKERS.

Milestones that are Still Standing on Old Bellefonte and Philipsburg Turnpike.

Referring to the old Bellefonte and Philipsburg pike and to the query in the article in the Daily News of June 9th. "What has become of all those old milestones?" The answer is that at least two of them are standing. The first is found on the right hand or east side of the pike possibly 300 feet from the log-house (still standing and occupied) wherein Mrs. Boileau (grandmother Boileau as the older people who travel the pike, still call her, when memory serves them well) "kept the gate." It bears the inscription

To B. 1 M. To P. 31 M.

The last figure instead of 1 may have been 4. The second stone stood in the borough of Milesburg a short distance north of the present residence of J. M. Green Esq., but has been lost or broken.

There is a third near the stone house above Snow Shoe Intersection. There are others possibly all along the pike yet undisturbed. These stones are the tombstones marking the dead and gone pike, a great improvement in its day and a thoroughfare over which coaches and four and stage coaches galore flew at the merry crack of the Jehu's whip.

The old coach swung on great leather "springs" with a "boot" on behind for trunks, mail bags and stow-aways, a seat on the box for Jehu and two fortunate or unfortunate passengers, as the weather was pleasant or unpleasant, and a little iron railing around the top to keep on light baggage and sometimes light passengers, ran daily up until the early fifties over the old pike.

In 1837 Wm. Iddings of Boggs Township, father of Austin Iddings, was the owner of a line of four, four horse coaches running from Bellefonte to Brookville, and they were fine coaches too.

Dr. Foster of Philipsburg was possibly the last owner of a Concord stage coach in Centre County. He ran a line in the early sixties from Tyrone to Clearfield and the writer recalls having seen two or three of the old stagers in the Dr. barns', at least as late as 1865.

Wm. Iddings kept the Bald Eagle House in 1827. The house stood on the north bank of the Bald Eagle Creek a little farther to the south of the creek than the present brick residence which replaced the old Curtin House in Central City. Iddings was multifarious in his business operations, running a hotel, a stage line, a store, saw mill and freighting iron ore down the Bald Eagle in "Arks" for the Iron Manufacturers of that day.

These milestones should be preserved as are the milestones on the old National Pike in Washington, Fayette and other counties through which the government road ran.

A Veteran and the Academy.

Rev. James P. Hughes, of the Bellefonte Academy, has planned for himself a most delightful summer vacation. He will spend a week in Washington, D. C., with his son Charles, who is now located in this most charming of American cities. Perhaps it is that he may more thoroughly appreciate the vast difference between East and West that Mr. Hughes takes a week to enjoy the conventions and attractions of the national capital before going to Dakota, where he will visit his brother Jacob for the remainder of the summer. If he were a younger man we might suspect him of designs on other game than such as he can bring down with the gun he is carrying along, as his ambitions for the Academy have always been sufficiently broad to reach even the Dakotas. One thing is certain and that is that had he, with his enthusiasms, earlier struck the West he would undoubtedly have aroused a response that would have brought him—long before his 54th year of teaching—an Academy such as the one in Bellefonte we are all now so proud of.

In the West there is a progressiveness and readiness on educational matters that makes the people keen to do anything, everything for improvements and that just now.

When we think of it, it is more to our shame that only after fifty years of hard work and discouragements is Mr. Hughes seeing fruition. This summer of 1904 is most opportune and well chosen for such a trip as it is after the most successful year, educational and financial, the Academy has ever had and it can be with pride and satisfaction that Mr. Hughes thinks and speaks of his Academy, for while we call it Bellefonte Academy it is really the brain and indefatigable one[s] of the Hughes, father and son, that has made it a preparatory school so famously known throughout the East.

—"The Filigree Ball."

There is no use in talking about a balanced ration to millions of the earth's inhabitants, for they have to eat just what they can get.

It is about an even thing which of the three will most sorely tax a man's patience—a gasoline engine with a spell on, a balky horse or a windmill which is idle for want of wind.

The man with the fourteen foot seeder, the four horse disk and the twenty-two foot harrow makes very short work of putting the crop in on a 200 acre farm.

It has been a poor year for the feeders and finishers of beef cattle unless they have been feeding the very best. The feeders of low grade stock have not realized over 20 cents a bushel for the corn fed.

We never until this year heard of a swarm of bees starting out on a hunt for a location early in April, when winter still had a good grip, but this spring a swarm took possession of a vacant space in a cream hauler's wagon thus early in the season.

If a man can secure a good tenant on a term of years the farm so rented, if let on shares, will one year with another bring in a much better income for the landlords than where it is rented for cash, but one needs the right sort of tenant and the long lease.

Not many people keep poultry with profit in town. The range is so circumscribed, all food has to be bought, and unless great care is taken the enforced confinement impairs the laying ability of the fowls. A dozen hens may perhaps be profitably kept on the average town premises, but not many more.

The problem of what to do with the old and faithful horse that has outlived his usefulness and become an expense to keep is a very common one. Some trade him to a horse jockey; some let him live and starve; some finish him up with hard work. Better by far humanely kill the old servant.

Cuba raised a magnificent crop of high grade tobacco the past year, so much that the shed room for the curing was totally inadequate, and in some cases the people moved from their houses and lived in tents in order that they might use their homes for curing the crop.

It is an interesting fact in nature that the pollen and the silk of the corn plant are so arranged in the order of their development that they are never in conjunction—that is, it is made almost impossible for the plant to fertilize itself, the pollen from one plant being used to fertilize the silk of some adjacent plant.

A hotbed which only took a couple of hours to make was by the middle of April furnishing us an abundance of nice radishes and lettuce, while there were, besides, several hundred tomato, cabbage and pepper plants, cauliflower and eggplants, enough for our own use and some for the neighbors. Worth doing? Well, we should say so.

Very high prices for any farm commodity one year will almost always be followed by low prices for the same product the next year, the average man being fierce to buy high priced seed and plant largely, thereby glutting the market. The best time to take up the growing of any special crop is when it is selling below the cost of production; then the same man will not touch it.

The standard varieties of apples—the sorts which the money is made from—are invariably prolific fruiters, a fact which some men overlook in selecting their orchard stock. Many of the choicest apples in quality are such shy and uncertain bearers that they are utterly unprofitable to raise. It is this quality of productiveness and reliability which places such apples as Wealthy, Ben Davis, Patten's Greening and Longfield in high favor. When this type of fruit is planted one knows he will have apples to sell.

Ninety young people recently graduated from the three year course of the Minnesota Agricultural college. Of these, thirty-three were young ladies, and the question comes up, Where could thirty-three young ladies be found better fitted to successfully meet all the responsibilities of modern womanhood? The fifty-seven young men will be heard from as stock raisers, fruit growers, teachers in other colleges possessed as they are of what is really among the most valuable knowledge attainable by man—the knowledge how best to use the earth to make it minister to the wants of the race.

A DISGRACE.

The country schoolhouse should certainly be as attractive in appearance as the country homes which surround it, but it is very rarely the case. The average country schoolhouse with its surroundings is an utterly neglected and repulsive thing, a blur on an otherwise beautiful rural landscape, of dog kennel type of architecture, a lone tree or two trying to battle for existence in a hard sod or recover from the mutilation caused by using it for a hitching post, surrounded by a dilapidated fence and pleading for a coat of paint and an expression of patriotism from the men and women who send their boys and girls there to be educated. These things need not be and should not be. Local pride should make the schoolhouse and its grounds pleasant and attractive. It costs but little to set out a dozen good trees and care for them a few years. It needs a little paint and patriotism, just one or two women to make a kick, and it would be remedied in short order.

WHEN HE COMES WEST.

When a man from the east comes west and goes to working a farm he has some queer experiences. Trained all his life on the eastern farm to habits of the most rigid economy and saving, he is appalled at the seeming wastes on every hand connected with western agriculture. He quickly finds out that his western farm is too large and too productive to permit of the eastern ways. From the sheer force of circumstances he is forced to see lots of weeds grow in his cornfield, more or less waste of crops in the harvesting owing to the methods employed, little losses and wastes here and there all the time, just because there is so much stuff and so little help to care for it all. He does not like it at all at first, but finally comes to the sensible conclusion that if a thing costs more to save than it is worth when saved it is best to let it alone.

CATALPA FOR POSTS.

We have two or three inquiries as to the value of the catalpa as a tree to be planted for post timber. Where it will do well it is one of the most valuable of trees for this purpose. It combines a rapid growth with great durability when used for this purpose. A tree planted fifteen years ago by a near neighbor on his lawn measures ten inches through at the butt and will furnish two post cuts or a total of at least six first class posts. North of latitude 40 there is some difficulty in getting the tree well started owing to the extreme cold of the winters killing the new growth back, but after the tree gets six years old it becomes hardier and from that time on seems to be as hardy as a bur oak. It likes best a rich and moist soil, and there are hundreds of thousands of waste acres all over the country which could not be put to a better use than to plant them with catalpa trees.

TWO WASTES.

There are two wastes which may be noted on most farms—one a waste by erosion, the leaching of the soil by melting snows and summer rains, which rob the soil of its best and most fertile components. This is especially noticeable on all rolling and hilly lands. A frequent rotation of clover on such fields will do much to prevent this trouble, and when planted to corn the planting should be so done as to avoid giving the water a direct descent down the slope. Another waste which it seems hard to avoid is the great growth of weeds in cornfields after they are laid by and in grain fields after the crop is removed. There are plenty of good farms on which the weeds produced are more exhaustive to the soil than are the crops. These are the farms where a man is trying to work too much land, and the real value of a flock of sheep in connection with such farms is not appreciated as it should be.

ARE YOU RICH?

When is a man rich? Is it when he has a half section farm, worth $30,000, or when he commands a $3,000 salary, or when he owns a big store and does a business of $50,000 a year, or when as a capitalist he cannot spend his income? None of these. Any man is rich who is contented and who is in the enjoyment of good health, who has the respect of his friends and neighbors, who can earn enough to pay his way, keep square with the world and care for his family. His calling may be a lowly one, his income small, his influence limited, his name unknown outside the community in which he lives, but still he is rich, the possessor of a sort of wealth which time can never tarnish or the misfortunes of life rob him of. There are some very poor men who are rated among the millionaires, for they have none of these things.

A ROAD PROBLEM.

We attended a farmers' institute this winter in a section where bad roads were not the result of rain and mud, but where their worst roads were in the driest times, the soil being of a light, sandy texture, which would not compact by travel. How to make these roads passable in a dry time was one of the most important topics discussed, and it is a problem, much as the man who lives on the gumbo soils may feel like laughing at it.

Running is one of the best exercises in the world for girls. It contributes for one thing that elasticity without which grace is impossible and keeps every bodily function to its appropriate duty.

TREE PLANTING.

There are many mistakes made in the matter of tree planting. A very common one where trees are being set in the home lot for shade and decoration is to set them in straight rows instead of irregularly in groups, the best pattern to follow being nature's method of artistic irregularity; then, the trees being small, so many seem to forget they will grow to be large, and so set them too near the house, only to bury the house in a dense shade and shut out the sun, and it is rare to find a man with sand enough to cut down the handsome trees which he planted twenty years previously. Then mistakes are made, and bad ones, in the selection of varieties. No man ever regrets planting a white elm, a hard maple, a white ash, a catalpa, a blue spruce or a white pine if they are planted in the right place, but the Lombardy poplar, the Balm of Gilead, the cottonwood, the box elder and the willow very soon outlive their usefulness; then it quite often happens that one may combine profit and aesthetic beauty by planting a fruit tree instead of a deciduous forest tree. No tree is better suited for a lawn decoration than the cherry, either tame or wild, while the plum will brighten the lawn with its bloom in the spring and reward all who seek its shade later on with its fruit. For street planting probably no tree gives such general satisfaction as the American elm. We would not, however, discourage any one from planting the poor varieties if that is the very best they can do, for any sort of tree is better than none at all.

USELESS GAME LAWS.

As it looks to us, all attempts at legislation to secure the preservation of the wild game of this country will come to naught. The people generally do not respect game laws. This fact, coupled with the advent of modern firearms, the changed conditions under which wild things have to live and the almost insane desire to kill all types of wild things on sight, makes the early extinction of nearly all kinds of game, both flesh and fowl, absolutely certain. The buffalo, the deer, the wild turkey, the wild pigeon, the ruffed grouse and the prairie chicken are practically all gone, while the wild fowl—geese, ducks and swan—are so harassed by the bombardment 2,000 miles long which they have to endure both spring and fall that their flight is diverted to the far west or made at such heights from the earth that they are beyond sight and hearing. The game hog, the market hunter and the pump gun have about completed the tragedy.

TOO MANY SCRUBS.

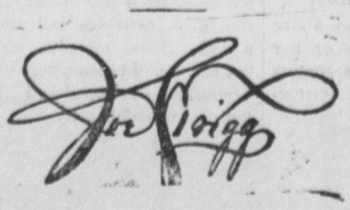
Of the 60,000,000 cattle in the United States 10,000,000 are grades, 600,000 are thoroughbreds of the various breeds and 43,100,000 are natives or scrubs. The thoroughbred cattle are divided as follows: Shorthorns, 425,000; Jerseys, 125,250; Holsteins, 75,000; Red Polls, 25,000; Guernseys, 15,000; Devons, 9,000; Ayrshires, 8,500; Polled Durhams, 5,000; Brown Swiss, 1,800; Dutch Belted, 600. This shows what an enormous field there is for improvement in this line.

WILLOWS AND SWAMPS.

We came across lately what we knew thirty years ago as a muskeg swamp of four acres, an undrainable and utterly worthless and unproductive plot of land upon an otherwise good farm. The owner, finding he could not drain the swamp for lack of outlet, did a novel thing. He waded in and stuck cuttings of the common white willow all over it—this probably about twenty years ago. As we saw the old swamp the other day the water stood three feet deep all among as fine a grove of thrifty willows as we ever saw, trees forty feet high and almost a foot through. The old bog, so worthless, had been converted into a very valuable timber tract which would furnish at least sixty cords of wood to the acre and when cut off would immediately proceed to renew itself. This is a novel type of forestry, but none the less valuable for all that. Thousands of farms all over the west offer the chance for experiments as above indicated.

In these days of sharp business competition and improved commercial methods eggs are still sold by count and not by weight, an unjust and unfair method, the like of which is not found in the buying and selling of any other commodity that we know of. The French people long ago discarded the count method, and we wonder why it is not done in this country.

Our observations lead us to believe that not less than 60 per cent of the young birds which are hatched of almost any species, save the sparrow, are destroyed from one cause or another before they are able to leave the nest and care for themselves. The domestic cat is one of their worst enemies, the crow and blue jay raid the nests of the tree building birds, while the skunk raids the nests of those which build on the ground. We have known a cat to wipe out a family of eight young wrens in one afternoon, taking them one by one as they left the nest. Birds, like men, find it hard to adapt themselves to civilized conditions. When we consider the tragedies which beset all bird life the wonder is we have any birds left.



NOT IN THE BIBLE.

Quotations Popularly Attributed to the Good Book.

"There are a number of sentences not in the Bible which everybody thinks are there," said a clergyman. "The chief of these sentences is, 'He tempers the wind to the shorn lamb.' You would search the Bible pretty thoroughly before you would find that sentence in it. Where you would find it would be in Sterne's 'Sentimental Journey.'

"Sterne gets a good deal of praise for the origination of this sentence, but it was originated, as a matter of fact, before he was born. In a collection of French proverbs published in 1594 we find, 'Dieu mesure le vent a la brebis tondue.' That convicts Sterne of plagiarism.

"'In the midst of life we are in death.' Everybody thinks that is in the Bible. It isn't, though. It is in the burial service.

"'That he who runs may read.' This is another sentence supposed, wrongly, to be Biblical. It is not Biblical, though the Bible has something very like it—namely, 'That he may run that readeth.'

"'Prone to sin as the sparks fly upward.' The Bible nowhere contains those words.

"'A nation shall be born in a day.' The nearest thing to that in the Good Book is, 'Shall a nation be born at once?'"

A Hint to Papa.

Twenty times William Archibald Stewart had been forbidden to cross the trolley tracks to buy candy, and twenty times William Archibald Stewart had disobeyed. Patience had ceased to be a virtue with William Stewart's father.

"Don't be too hard on him," the mother pleaded.

But William's father had his dander up and his rattan ready as he summoned the culprit into his august presence.

"Willie," he said, "how many times have you been forbidden to cross the trolley tracks to buy candy?"

William did not answer, but stood with head lowered and hands ready to press to his eyes.

"Don't you know it hurts papa even more than it does you to have to punish his little boy? Now, suppose you had a little boy and you had told him twenty times not to cross the trolley tracks, and suppose he disobeyed you—what would you do with him?"

William swallowed a lump in his throat and threw back his shoulders with a visible effort.

"Papa," he said, "I don't think I'd like it. But—but I'd—I'd try everything in this world before I'd lick my child!"—New York Press.

The Waits of Old.

Five hundred years ago minstrels attached to the king's court were called waits, probably from the old French verb waiter, to watch. It was their duty to guard the streets at night and proclaim the hour, as watchmen did afterward until the appointment of police.

We find them spoken of by Rymen in the reign of Edward IV. as follows: "A wayte, that nightelye from Mychelmas to Shreve Thorsdaye pipethe the watche. He eateth in the halle with mynstrielles."

Another derivation is indicated by Butler in his "Principles of Musick," published in 1636, who mentions "the waits of hoboys." In confirmation of this Dr. Bushy says of waits in his "Musical Dictionary," "This noun formerly signified hautboys, and from the instruments its signification was after a time transferred to the performers themselves, who, being in the habit of parading the streets at night with their music, occasioned the name to be applied generally to all such musicians."—London Chronicle.

COLONEL MONROE

The Lincolnville Philosopher Does Not Share the Common Fear That an Industrial Panic Is Impending

By FREDERICK UPHAM ADAMS

Copyright, 1903, by Frederick Upham Adams

"THERE seems to be a general fear that an industrial panic is about due," observed Judge Sawyer. "I notice hints of it in many of the papers. I hope these croakers are mistaken."

"There never will be another industrial panic such as the ones with which we are familiar," said Colonel Monroe. "The old fashioned panic is now an impossibility."

"Why do you make that prediction?"

"For the good and sufficient reason that we have installed a new industrial system," replied Colonel Monroe. "The panic of 1873 was typically an industrial panic. There was another one in 1884, but it was of less intensity. The panic of 1893 was of a different character. It was more of a financial or speculative panic than an industrial one. An industrial panic is a stampede of manufacturers and merchants who suddenly make the discovery that there is no market for the wares on hand. As a consequence factories are closed in all parts of the country, millions of workmen are discharged, prices fall, a rush is made on deposit and savings banks—hundreds of which are forced into bankruptcy—and a long period of depression and general suffering follows. It is possible that something may occur to produce all of these effects, but it cannot spring from the same causes. The trusts were specially designed to prevent the recurrence of industrial panics, and I have considerable faith in their efficiency. Trusts and labor unions have reduced the danger from severe industrial panics to a minimum."

"I confess I cannot see how," declared Judge Sawyer.

"Panics are a phenomenon incidental to a purely competitive system of industry," explained Colonel Monroe. "Thirty years ago we enjoyed all of the fruits of competition. Workingmen competed with one another for jobs until wages dropped to the lowest point at which it was possible to support life. Manufacturers competed for the sale of their products and cut prices to a point where losses were inevitable. Take the steel industry as an example. There were then hundreds of manufacturers of steel products. Each concern went blindly ahead producing goods on a wild chance that a market could be found. In order to exist each manufacturer cut wages to the lowest possible point. The individual manufacturer had no way in which to determine the consuming power of the public, nor had he any method of ascertaining when he and his competitors had reached the danger point of an overproduction of steel commodities. All plunged ahead in the dark. The amount which can be produced depends wholly on the consuming power of the people and largely on that of the wageworkers. It finally sifts itself down to the size of the wage fund. By steadily reducing the wages of their employees the manufacturers in those glorious days of unrestricted competition eventually succeeded in so curtailing consumption as to force a general suspension of industry and in accomplishing their own ruin; hence the periodical return of industrial panics with the following years of depression.

"Any man possessed of sufficient intelligence to lead him to go indoors or put up an umbrella when it rains should have understood that the output of factories was fixed by the purchasing capacity of the community. A blow leveled at the wage earner recoiled on the stockholder of an industrial enterprise. A successful conspiracy to depress the price of grains crippled the manufacturer fully as much as it did the farmer. The latter's wife patched up his old clothes, and the cotton and woolen mills went into the hands of receivers. Unless the people can buy back that which they produce, the wheels of industry stop. All of this sounds so obvious as to seem stupid. It is as trite as it is to solemnly insist that three and four are seven, but despite all this the average small manufacturer of this country cannot get this idea through his thick skull. Judge, if I should ever obtain possession of a few surplus millions of dollars, I would start a night school for American manufacturers."

"What is the matter with the American manufacturer?" exclaimed Judge Sawyer. "He is generally supposed to lead the world in ability to protect his own interests. He seems to be getting along fairly well without your proposed night school. What would you teach him?"

"I should attempt to teach him not to regard every dollar expended in wages as money irreparably lost," declared Colonel Monroe. "I should attempt to convince him that his best interests are conserved by combining with other manufacturers for the purpose of maintaining the highest practical rate of wages rather than striving for the lowest which can be forced on those in his employ. I should attempt to explain to him that he cannot prosper unless his workmen prosper. At the present time he has the opposite idea. He vainly imagines that prosperity must first come to him and that he will then distribute it in the form of wages which must be gratefully accepted. It is about time that these deluded gentlemen were taught that prosperity depends on the market and not on the mill. It is those who buy, and not those who sell, who have in their keeping the well being of the community.

"The average manufacturer imagines that his road to wealth lies in the way of elevating prices to the highest possible point and of depressing wages to the lowest possible scale. Occasionally he can see an advantage in cutting prices, but his one consuming ambition is to reduce his wage fund. He cannot comprehend that in the final analysis his employees are his customers. He cannot discern the plain truth that those who work for him must buy back that which they create. Who else will buy it? If pianos are to be manufactured and sold, a country must have a piano buying wage scale.

"But what is your piano manufacturer contemplating this very moment? He is to join an association of employers which will start a crusade against 'the tyranny of labor unions.' I am not defending many of the methods of labor unions. Some of them are guilty of petty exactions and of unwarranted use of power. But who taught them their lessons? But our piano manufacturer is really concerned with only one result of trade unionism. It has forced him to pay a higher wage scale. Therefore it must be attacked and if possible destroyed. True, times have never been so prosperous as since organized labor compelled more pay for its members, but that is only a coincidence. Thus reasons the intellectual piano manufacturer. The market is active in the piano trade. All that is necessary in order for him to get richer than ever is to cut the wage scale in two and keep on selling as many pianos as before, or more, at the same or higher prices.

"There are three grades of intelligence among manufacturers. Those of the first class have learned the wisdom of organized industry as opposed to competitive capitalistic anarchy. They also accord the same right of organization to their employees. They have come to know that the best results for all concerned will be obtained by selling their output at the minimum of a safe profit and by paying the highest wage scale possible to a balance on the right side of their ledgers. They do not always do this, but they realize that it is scientifically correct from an economic and business viewpoint. If such a system were generally adopted the menace of industrial panics would be forever removed.

"The second grade of manufacturing intelligence recognizes the advantages of a combination of employers and affirms their right to thus consolidate, but denies both the advantage and the right on the part of the wage earners. They seem to regard employment as a gift of their bestowing, and assume that their dignity is offended and their perogatives infringed upon the moment their employees suggest that there is a solidarity of interest which entitles them to consideration. They refuse to 'recognize' a union of those men and women whose loyalty and intelligence make their success possible. The third class knows nothing and seemingly is incapable of learning anything of the advantages or results of combination for the protection of its own interests or for that of its employees. It possesses an independence akin to that of the sheep which wander about in the storm rather than seek a common shelter. It spends no useless time in thinking of any problems more intricate than getting the very most it can out of those compelled to work for it. No matter what the future holds in store, this latter class is doomed to speedy and complete extinction.

"I have wandered from my subject a trifle, but the point I wish to make clear is this: The long and uninterrupted period of comparative prosperity this nation has enjoyed has been made possible by an intelligent co-operation between organized industry and organized labor. There are no signs that this alliance is to be disrupted. The unions are strong enough to protect themselves against such plutogogues as have recently been active in stirring up strife. The consuming power of the public is still enormous. It is made so by a high wage scale and a fair rate for the products of farm and plantation. So long as these conditions are not seriously disturbed there can be no industrial panic. The men who seek to combine to generally reduce wages may not know it, but they are traitors to their own best interests and a menace to the continued prosperity of the nation."

"I believe you are right, colonel; I honestly do," exclaimed Postmaster Jenkins, who had been listening attentively. "It seems pretty tough to pay a carpenter a dollar a day more than we did a few years ago, but he spends the money for things and helps keep the factories running and men at work. If wages were cut down, he couldn't buy so much, and somebody else would lose his job. The more each man gets the more everybody gets. I can't express it the way you do, but I think I know what you mean, and for once I think you are right. I am going to raise the wages of our hired girl a dollar a week and help things along."

Wisdom For Wives.

A country vicar in the old country was noted for his excellent fatherly advice to young couples he wedded. He had printed cards of advice, which he used to distribute, besides giving guidance verbally. One of the cards was for the man and the other for the woman. That to the woman ran as follows: "When you marry him love him; after you marry him study him; if he is honest honor him; if he is generous appreciate him; when he is sad cheer him; when he is cross amuse him; when he is talkative listen to him; when he is quarrelsome ignore him; if he is slothful spur him; if he is noble praise him; if he is confidential encourage him; if he is secretive trust him; if he is jealous cure him; if he cares naught for pleasure coax him; if he favors society accompany him; if he does you a favor thank him; when he deserves it kiss him; let him think how well you understand him, but never let him know that you 'manage' him."

The Boy's Room.

When a boy's room is not furnished with a couch the boy is extremely apt to lie on the bed to read, the chances of his removing his shoes or protecting the white spread before lying down being extremely slender. Rather than indulge in vain remonstrances banish the white spread altogether and substitute denim, blue, if it can be made to fit into the color scheme of the room. Have the center of the spread plain, with a border twelve to eighteen inches deep of figured denim, fleur-de-lis or something similar. The denim takes on a better color, as repeated washings dull its first brightness. It does not easily wrinkle, and the comfort of the boy is insured.

are caused by indigestion. If you eat a little too much, or if you are subject to attacks of indigestion, the stomach expands—swells, and puffs up against the heart. This crowds the heart and shortens the breath. Rapid heart beats and heart disease is the final result. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat, takes the strain off the heart, cures indigestion, dyspepsia, sour stomach, and contributes nourishment, strength and health to every organ of the body. Trade Review For the Week.

NEW YORK, July 2.—R. G. Dun & Company's Weekly Review of Trade today will say:

"Although the new fiscal year opens with an extended holiday there is much encouragement in evidence of returning confidence, and statistics for the past six months indicate that there is no little reason for anticipating better things in the last half of the year,

Reports from leading branches of trade for the last week testify to a quiet condition, but scarcely more so than is customary at this time of the year, while inquiries in several manufacturing lines promise a better distribution in the near future. Some important discussions over wage scales have reached amicable settlement, and the protected glove makers' strike is declared off, leaving the local garment workers' trouble the most serious controversy Prospects are still favorable for large returns on the farms, despite some loss from storms during the past week. Confidence grows in iron and steel industry, although as yet there is little support in the shape of increased orders. But the amount of business in sight and contemplated work held back sufficient to provide a good tonnage whenever it is decided that the time has come to place contracts. It is hoped that the conference next week will be productive of good results, although there is a wide difference of opinion regarding the advisability of reducing quotations.

One reason for the better feeling may be found in the satisfactory arrangement of wage scale and other labor matters. Fuel is less active because of the idleness in manufacturing, but anthracite collieries are still producing freely and the usual monthly advance in price became effective July 1st.

Buyers of footwear are seeking concessions because of the decline in sole leather, but manufacturers insist that other factors maintain the cost. A further decline in the price of cotton goods has not sufficed to increase the size of individual purchases. Woolen piece goods are affected by the clothing strike, new lines being held back in hope of an early settlement. Meanwhile the raw material is decidedly strong.

Failure this week in the U. S., are 249 against 227 last week, and 257 the preceding week.

TUCKERED OUT.

This is a familiar expression of many men and woman after a day's work, whether it be brain work or bone labor. Tired out nerves and muscles, brain fagged, energy gone, sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, are the result of overwork; These are the warning signs that repairs to the system are demanded. To correct any of these conditions take Vin-te-na, and if you do not note improvement Mr. Sidney Krumrine will refund your money, as he guarantees every bottle of Vin-te-na. Why a Boiled Lobster Is Red.

In all crustaceans, as indeed in almost everything in nature, there is a certain per cent of iron. Upon boiling the lobster is oxidized. The effect is largely due also to the percentage of muriatic acid which exists naturally in the shell. The chemical change which takes place here is almost similar to that which occurs in the burning of a brick. In boiling a lobster its coat ceases to be a living substance, and to a certain extent it takes a new character.

It is as a brick would be after burning. This effect can also be produced by the sun, but necessarily not so rapid, as the heat of that luminary, although more intense, is not concentrated sufficiently to produce the result. The sun also exercises a bleaching influence which consumes the oxide almost as fast as it is formed, leaving the shell white or nearly pure lime.

The exports of cereals from Russia amount to 200,000,000 bushels, and every bushel of it should be kept in that country to feed the people, but they are forced to sell and then starve.

Miles Boom For President.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 30.—The boom for General Nelson A. Miles for the Prohibtion nomination for President was given a decided forward movement by a public meeting of delegates and visitors at the State House, following the adjournment of the afternoon session of the convention. Fifteen hundred people were present, of whom over four hundred wore delegates' badges. Alonzo E. Wilson, the Illinois State Chairman, presided. John G. Woolley, of Chicago, editor of The Voice, gave evidence as to General Miles' position. He raid he had been in close communication with General Miles during the past six weeks by letters, visits and conversations.

"I do not know that he will accept the nomination," said Mr. Wooley, "but I believe he will. I told him I was coming to Indianapolis to assist in his nomination unless he forbade me. He did not forbid me and if he were to allow me to come under these circumstances and then decline the nomination he is not the sensitive gentleman he should be."

Conversation with General Miles were related by Mr. Woolley in which General Miles said the Prohibitionists did wrong to confine themselves to one issue when there were such questions also as the civil service, the Constitution following the flag, the United States having subjects, popular election of Senators and the return of sovereignty to the hands of the people. General Miles was quoted as saying their would soon be a breaking up of old parties and in the realignment the liquor question would be one of vital issues.

Reference was made by Mr. Woolley and other speakers to General Miles' record as against canteens and his alleged mistreatment at the hands of the administration. The meeting was enthusiastic.

General Miles was quoted on authority of the Rev. D. B. Turney, of Illinois, as having said he voted the Prohibition ticket in the last election and as being for the past four years a total abstainer. Other addresses were made by R. H. Patton, of Springfield, Ills., Allen Coffin, of Massachusetts and John Hector of Pennsylvania, all favoring Miles' nomination.

The new National Prohibition Committee, elected Wednesday, met Wednesday night and organized by electing the following officers:

Chairman, Oliver W. Stewart, Chicago.

Vice Chairman, A. G. Wolfenbarger, Lincoln, Neb.

Secretary, James Tate, Harriman, Tenn.

Treasurer, Samuel Dickie, Albion, Mich.

The Executive Committee consists of these four and five members selected by National Chairman Stewart as follows:

J. B. Cranfill, Dallas Texas; B. B. Haugan, Fergus Falls, Minn; A. A. Stevens; Tyrone, Pa. Charles Eckhart, Auburn, Ind., J. B. Vancise, Newark N. J.

It was stated by an official of the committee that a majority is opposed to the nomination of General Miles and in favor of a single issue platform.

EVE

By....
Barry Preston

Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure

It was a mere whimsical idea that prompted Adam Breck to swing suddenly round in his office chair that gray November day and say, "Throw in the farm at Buttonwood, Jimmy, for good measure, and we'll close the deal here and now." It was an equally whimsical idea that sent Breck up to Buttonwood the following June to inspect the farm; for Jimmy Cregar had closed the deal then and there, and a deed to the place, duly drawn up and recorded, had reposed in a pigeonhole of Adam's desk since November.

He had scarcely given the place a thought heretofore, and as to what it might be like he had not cared a whit, for the deal would have been decidedly to his advantage even without the farm. That June morning, however, in overhauling his papers, he had come across the deed, and, with one of those sudden decisions for which he was famous, he was off to Buttonwood to see his farm, the deed in one pocket and a bunch of jingling keys in another. He might sell the place, he might rent it, he might give it away. That was immaterial. The charm of the affair lay in its incongruity. He was starting out to inspect a piece of property the very existence of which he had ignored for some months. He chuckled to himself as he climbed into the smoker of the train.

That evening Adam sat on the stone doorstep of his Buttonwood house. He had been most happily disappointed in the place. The house was a low, rambling, story and a half affair, in an excellent state of repair. An inviting piazza ran along the northern side; the western end was half hidden under rambler rose bushes just coming into bloom, and a box hedge divided his domain from the road. To the left he could see the cozy house of a nearby neighbor, Dr. Thurston, as Breck learned from the lantern above the gatepost next door. The peace and quiet of the place appealed to him. Seated there in the red twilight Adam suddenly felt a desire to remain here—to build up the place by his own efforts. Sell it, rent it, give it away? No, indeed. He would build it into a little Eden of his own devising. And, the mood being strong upon him, he trudged the mile and a half to town to telegraph for his effects.

"MORE EDENS TO CONQUER?" SHE ASKED LIGHTLY.

Early next morning Breck set to work. With a pair of ancient pruning shears he had found in the shed he was trimming the hedge, which, somehow or other, was not the simple task he had imagined. He was awkwardly lopping off the twigs when he became aware some one was watching him from the other side of the fence. He turned and saw a girl looking at him from the depths of a sunbonnet. She was an amazingly pretty girl, and the laughter lurking in her eyes was a trifle disconcerting.

"Good morning," she said. "Are you our new neighbor?"

Breck doffed his hat, and, fishing in his vest pocket, found a card. He approached the girl.

"I am Adam," he announced, presenting the card, "and this is Eden I am making. I fear I'm doing it badly," he added, with a deprecatory wave toward the gouged hedge.

"Rather," said the girl, her eyes sparkling. "If you like, papa will lend you the gardener."

"Oh, no," said Adam; "this is to be an Eden of my own making. Therein lies the charm."

They talked of commonplace matters—of strawberries and pansy beds and the like. He discovered she was Edith Thurston, the doctor's daughter. He also discovered she was the most charming young woman it had been his privilege to meet. When she turned to the house he watched her to the door.

"Eve, by Jove!" he asserted, as she entered. Then he returned to his hedge trimming with a vigor which threatened to exterminate it.

After that they entered into the jolliest sort of friendship. Every morning she called across the fence: "Good morning, Mr. Adam. What is the latest bulletin from Eden?" Whereat Adam would perch on the fence and drolly relate his experiences with the pruning shears or the lawn mower, or he would set forth his doubts as to where the raspberry bushes should be set out. Summer waxed and Eden grew.

"It's finished," said Adam, almost regretfully. "Eden is complete as far as my work goes."

They sat on the stone doorstep in the twilight of a late July day. The girl was looking pensively at the red sky.

"More Edens to conquer?" she asked lightly.

"No," he said. "I want to complete this one."

"You said it was finished," she said.

"I said my work on it was finished," he returned. "Here is Adam," he went on, "and here is Eden. There's a discrepancy."

"You won't have any trouble finding the serpent," she observed.

"Eve came before the serpent," he said.

"I should think," she said, "you'd profit by example. Eve was the undoing of the original garden."

"There'll be no serpent in this garden," he said. "I've made this solely for Eve. Every flower bed I have made, every drop of paint I have put on, has been with the thought of Eve. It's all for her."

"Then you had Eve in mind when you came here?" she asked.

"Yes," he fabricated unblushingly.

"Oh," she said in a queer little voice. "I've always known her," he went on, "from the time I was a child."

She was silent.

"I've always thought I'd make her an Eden with my own hands. I hope she'll be happy here. Do you suppose it will suit her?" he asked anxiously.

"It should," she said.

"Does it suit her?" he asked very gently.

She started. "Pray how do I know?" she said coldly.

He slipped an arm about her and drew her close to him.

"I've always known her," he explained, "but I never saw her until she looked at me across a fence and laughed at me from the depths of a sunbonnet because I gouged the hedge. Does it suit her?" he repeated.

"Adam." There was a world of tenderness in her voice.

"Eve," he said gently.

A DISGRACE.

The country schoolhouse should certainly be as attractive in appearance as the country homes which surround it, but it is very rarely the case. The average country schoolhouse with its surroundings is an utterly neglected and repulsive thing, a blur on an otherwise beautiful rural landscape, of dog kennel type of architecture, a lone tree or two trying to battle for existence in a hard sod or recover from the mutilation caused by using it for a hitching post, surrounded by a dilapidated fence and pleading for a coat of paint and an expression of patriotism from the men and women who send their boys and girls there to be educated. These things need not be and should not be. Local pride should make the schoolhouse and its grounds pleasant and attractive. It costs but little to set out a dozen good trees and care for them a few years. It needs a little paint and patriotism, just one or two women to make a kick, and it would be remedied in short order.

WHEN HE COMES WEST.

When a man from the east comes west and goes to working a farm he has some queer experiences. Trained all his life on the eastern farm to habits of the most rigid economy and saving, he is appalled at the seeming wastes on every hand connected with western agriculture. He quickly finds out that his western farm is too large and too productive to permit of the eastern ways. From the sheer force of circumstances he is forced to see lots of weeds grow in his cornfield, more or less waste of crops in the harvesting owing to the methods employed, little losses and wastes here and there all the time, just because there is so much stuff and so little help to care for it all. He does not like it at all at first, but finally comes to the sensible conclusion that if a thing costs more to save than it is worth when saved it is best to let it alone.

Polly—Yes; and I promised to marry him.

"Did he ask your father's permission?"

Not His Kind.

"Would you die for me?" she asked dreamily.

"Oh, say," he retorted in a matter of fact way, "if you haven't any more ambition than to be looking for dead ones you're not the girl for me!"—Chicago Post.

Changed His Mind.

The healthy old man wears his gray hairs like a silver crown. What if he be threescore and ten if there is still fire in his eye, firmness in his step, command in his voice and wisdom in his counsel? He commands love and reverence. Yet how few wear the mantle of age with dignity: Dim eyed, querulous of speech, halting in step, childish in mind, they "lag superfluous on the stage," dragging out the fag end of life in a simple existence The secret of a healthy old age is a healthy middle age. The man who takes care of his stomach who keeps the body properly nourished will find that the body does not fail him in old age. The great value of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery lies in the preservation of the working power of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. Thos. A. Frank one of onr big farmers came near giving the undertaker a job last week, while cultivating corn with a two hoe machine which upset, making him some very bad bruises. The following day he got his legs tangled in the spreader and but for timely assistance he might have been badly hurt if not killed. His afflictions come fast in his old days. In the spring he hurt his right eye, which injury confined him to his room for many weeks and he is just able to be about again.

The clatter of the mowing machine is heard on all sides. The hay crop is not what was expected.

The greatest down pour of rain in years fell last Friday, washing the fresh plowed fields and newly made roads badly. During the storm G. E. Riders new barn near Gatesburg was struck by lightning but little damage done. Frank McFarlane's farm house occupied by D. W. Thomas was struck at the same time, demolishing the roof as well as the gable end of the attic passing down and out at bottom of new porch, tearing off some new plastering etc.,

On account of a fire cracker being thrown on the roof of Mrs. Thos. Reylor's home at Graysville, it came near going up in smoke. After the family had retired a strange crackling noise was heard and upon investigation it was found that the whole roof was ablaze, a bucket-brigade quickly formed saved the building from going to the ground.

The 128th anniversary of our Nations birth would have been forgotten had it not beed for a squad of small boys with tin horns and toy fire crackers reminding us that it was the glorious 4th. Everybody who had a rig, could hire or borrow one went to State College to shout for the college crowd.

Mrs. A. M. Brown gave a good old fashioned dinner party to Mr. and Mrs. Brown Sr., of Milroy, last Thursday. Sam'l Brown and wife of same place were also present as well as a few other guests. The Browns are royal entertainers and everybody received a royal welcome at their happy and cozy home at Pennsylvania Furnace.

It was a regular old time barn raising that took place at the residence of Geo. E. Harper, near White Hall last Saturday, when a big crowd of neighbors gathered to raise the frame of a large barn. Rev. Aikens and Rev. Illingsworth were on the grounds and did their share as well as at the sumptuous loaded table which Mrs Harper and her assistants had prepared. It was an all day task, the building is to be a regular Pennsylvania barn with a large straw shed attached. Wm. B. Ward and Sons are the contractors and builders.

BLANCHARD.

The Fourth passed off very quietly in our little village with the exception of a few "street solos" sung by one of our citizens who imbibed a little too freely in "fire water" and some dreadful swearing done by some others in like condition, which to say the least of it is disgusting in the extreme and should not be tolerated in a civilized community.

Next Thursday they will introduce the illustrated lecture of Uncle Tom's Cabin, among other things connected with the meeting and they invite all to attend. Every body should come and give the boys a helping hand, and be benefitted themselves by what they shall hear and see.

One by one they are going from among us, one by one the chairs are left vacant, and the hearts left desolate, yet we can look up with the eye of faith beyond the clouds to Him who doeth all things well and say "Thy will, not mine be done.

THE GAME OF THE SEASON.

Wonderful Base Ball Played on Meadow Brook Park.

With the assistance of the umpire the Undine base ball team were able to score 4 runs against the Roosevelt boys at a twilight game at the Meadow Brook Park on Wednesday evening.

The teams lined up nicely, the Undines at the bat, Hood in the box for the Roosevelts and in less time than it takes to write it he struck out three men, and it was the same until "Papie" was afraid the firemen would be lost in the woods, and in order to make things look right, (so he thought) he began to give some garlick decisions, and at the ending of the sixth inning the score stood 4 to 4.

Doak Keichline was put in the box and if a man who understood the game would have been the umpire, Doak would have struck out every man who was at the bat, but there is no use in any team bucking against the umpire because they wont get a "smell."

"Chauncey Depew" McSuley, was all to the good, and when a ball passed within fifty feet of him he was sure to have it, you would have thought it was "Gleason" the way he played, then there was "Fat" Houser, he is a corker of a good player and the way he hugged on to those balls out on 1st it was something wonderful.

"Huntz" Anderson was there and played short stop, he is an awful "rooter" but you couldnt understand what he was trying to say.

"Dickie" Valance played but he might just as well have stayed at the bakery, because he didn't get a chance to stretch those long legs of his like he did in the other game.

"Pike" Mills was there in all his glory and the way he slid over the bases you you would have thought he was giving some poor son-of-a-gun a quick shave.

"Bear" Rine stood back of the bat like a stone wall and if a cannon ball would have passed his way he would have caught it.

"Dr." Thomas with his derby and white shoes on did some grand-stand playing.

Johnston pitched for the Undines and struck out six men according to the umpires decisions.

Heinle caught for the firemen, he knew the game and would never enter into the many heated arguments that they had.

Take the game all around it was in fun and a better umpire should have officiated, but any time the Firemen want another game the Roosevelts will be ready for them.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

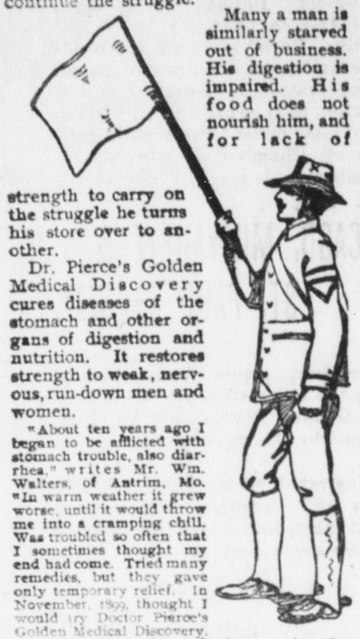
STARVED OUT.

Many a garrison has been forced to give up the fight and hang out the white flag of surrender, when lack of food has weakened the men past all power to continue the struggle.



Many a man is similarly starved out of business. His digestion is impaired. His food does not nourish him, and for lack of strength to carry on the struggle he turns his store over to another.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It restores strength to weak, nervous, run-down men and women.

"About ten years ago I began to be afflicted with stomach trouble, also diarrhea," writes Mr. Wm. Walters, of Antrim, Mo. "In warm weather it grew worse, until it would throw me into a cramping chill. Was troubled so often that I sometimes thought my end had come. Tried many remedies, but they gave only temporary relief. In November, 1899, thought I would try Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I got six bottles and took five in succession, then thought I would wait for a time and take the one left. Soon found I had symptoms of the trouble coming back, so took the sixth bottle and it cured me. I have enjoyed the best of health this summer, and the credit all belongs to your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I can't express my many thanks to Dr. Pierce for his remedy, for it did so much for me. Words cannot express how severely I suffered.

"If any doubt the above statement let them address me, and I will take great pleasure in answering."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the bowels and stimulate the sluggish liver.

The Man Among Them

By IRVINE PARDEE

...Copyright, 1903, by T. C. McClure...

It was a cold winter in school district No. 4, township of Ingham, county of Hillsdale, but they were making it pretty warm for the schoolma'am just the same. Miss Lee had come from a city fifty miles away, bringing the very best recommendations, and had taken hold of the school to the satisfaction of everybody. The trouble was that she was twenty years old and good looking. She could not help being good looking any more than a dozen farmer girls in the district could help their plain faces, but scarcely a fortnight had passed when mothers and daughters were sneering and backbiting.

No homely woman, be she married or single, can help being jealous of a handsome one. In the society of a city the homely one has the sense to conceal her feelings, but in the country she attends a quilting bee on purpose to speak her mind. If the widowers, bachelors and young men had stood aloof there would have been no gossip or hard feelings, but that was just what they wouldn't do. They admired, praised and pestered, and, though not encouraged in the slightest by the little schoolma'am, they got her into a peck of trouble.

The thing may be said to have started with Uncle Ben Driggs, chairman of the school committee. He was a widower, sixty years old, and had been courting the Widow Hastings, five years his junior, but what does he do but offer the schoolma'am his calloused hand and aged heart before she had hardly got the school organized.

She promptly refused him, but the Widow Hastings was her enemy from that time on, and Uncle Ben heard her gossiped about without coming to her defense. In the course of six weeks Miss Lee had turned down another widower and two young men and thus made more enemies. Several engagements were in danger of being broken because Jim, Joe or John would insist that the teacher was the daisiest daisy that ever called up a class in geography. The girl knew that she was making enemies and being slurred and slandered, but as it was not her fault and she had no remedy she maintained silence. This subjected her to criticism again. As Hannah Jones remarked at Mrs. Doolittle's quilting bee:

"If she isn't trying her best to capture a man of some sort, why don't she come right out and say she wouldn't marry the best one that ever wore boots, same as I do? I tell you she is sly and deceitful, and she'll separate more'n one lovin' couple before she gets through with it."

Before New Year's came there was only one marriageable man for four miles around who hadn't offered himself at least once. That was Abner Joy, a man of thirty, who had a farm of his own and a sister for a housekeeper. He had admired, but so secretly and modestly that Miss Lee had not suspected. He looked upon her as a superior being who could not be approached by such as he.

No one mistrusted his feelings until one evening when there was a paring bee at Uncle David Saunders'. The gathering included over forty people, old and young, and, as it was Miss Lee's week to board at the Saunders house, she ought to have been there. She was not, however, and, though the night had come on with a storm, nobody worried about the schoolma'am, not even Abner. When he failed to find her there he argued that she had stopped at a nearer place. In the gathering were several girls and women with spiteful tongues and several young and old men who wanted to "get even," and so after an hour or two, when Miss Lee's name came up, innuendo was busy in a moment. It was noticed that Abner Joy turned red and white and hitched uneasily, but it was quite ten minutes before he stood up and said:

"I see that Miss Lee is not present here this evening. Does any one know why?"

"She's probably hunting for a man," replied one of the girls, with a giggle, while Joe Allbright led the haw-hawing among the young men.

"Yes, she may be," said Abner as he looked around, with a dangerous gleam in his eyes, "but will Joe Allbright, Tom Smart and William Hall step outdoors with me for a moment?"

They followed him out, wondering what was up, but they were not long left in doubt. He turned upon them and gave the whole three a beautiful drubbing before they hardly knew that a fight was on. Then he called out Uncle Danforth, old bachelor, both of whom had been turned down, and, shaking his fist under their noses, he said:

"Mind you, this talk about Miss Lee has got to stop. The next man who even sneers at her has got to settle for it with me."

That didn't complete his work, however. He entered the house and said to the women:

"A pretty pack of wolves you are! You are gossiping about a woman whose shoes you are not fit to tie. It's gossip, slander and lies, and every one of you knows it, and I tell you I'll not stand any more of it. I can't roll you in the snowdrifts, because you are women, but I can and will hold your men folks responsible."

Half an hour later he was inquiring at Taylor's if Miss Lee was there, and again he stopped at Riker's. But he did not find her until he drove up to the schoolhouse. She sat there alone with her things on, and the open stove door was her candle. She had felt too weak and discouraged to face the storm, and didn't much care whether any one came for her or not.

"Miss Lee, I've come to take you home for the night," said Abner, as he entered the building.

"But why do you come?" she asked in surprise.

"Because I have constituted myself your champion. There won't be any more gossip. I'm ashamed of the people, but you'll see a change tomorrow."

"Wh—what have you done?" she asked between her sobs.

"Licked three or four men, promised to lick three or four more and told a dozen women what I thought about them," he laconically replied.

"But you'll—you'll"—

"Ask you to marry me? No, I won't—I'll be hanged if I do! Come along with me, and we'll pick up Sister Sarah at Saunders'."

"And you won't—won't"—

"Talk love? Not a word. I know you are ready to throw up the school and go back home, but don't give up. I've got my fists toughened up and want to use 'em often."

And when the summer days came and she closed her school with kind words from all she grasped the hand of Abner Joy and said:

"Abner, I have met a man down here—just one—and I hate to say goodby to him."

"Then why don't you come back and let him do some more fighting for you?" he asked.

"I—I guess I will, if you—you want me to," she replied as she drove away and three months later she did.

Countermanding Orders.

During the years of the Revolutionary war the Rev. Samuel Buell was pastor of the Easthampton church, on Long Island. He had been pastor there a great many years and had gained wide influence.

While the English occupied the island Sir William Erskine was in command. Between the parson and the military authorities a good understanding was kept up in spite of the political hostility.

There is yet told a story of the worthy parson to the effect that Sir William once ordered a number of the farmers of Easthampton to go over to Southampton to do a certain piece of work on the Sabbath. Before that day came around, however, the commander happened to meet the parson and told him frankly that he had ordered out his parishioners on Sunday.

"I know it, I know it," said the parson; "but, as it happens, I am myself commander in chief on that day, and I have countermanded the order."

Sir William yielded the point with a good natured laugh.

"Do you try to be contented with poverty, my man?" asked the rich donor.

"I'm afraid not," answered the hard up delinquent, "but just try me with riches and see how contented I'd be."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

J. W. GEPHART, General Superintendent

20 Years With Quay by His Ex-Secretary.

The most remarkable newspaper article of the year, one in which every Pennsylvanian will be interested, will take up two pages of the Sunday North American of Sunday, July 3. It's a study of Senator Quay, his methods and his deeds, by Frank Willing Leach, who for twenty years followed the fortunes of the dead Senator through good and evil times, except on two occasions, when his judgment regarding his duty to his party led him to oppose his chief.

In his tale of great events Mr. Leach has reserved nothing. He has written his story from the view point of an intimate friend and sincere admirer of Senator Quay. He has "set down naught in malice." His admiration for his chief is shown in every paragraph. He has, however, told Pennsylvania history with the assurance and verity of a capable chronicler, who observed from behind the scenes the manipulation of Senator Quay's political chessmen. One incident after another is cited to clear up the cloud of doubt that has surrounded many politcal events in Pennsylvania.

Mr. Leach explans how Senator Quay's system of political rewards and punishments turned upside down the plans of his lieutenants, how and why the "insurgent" of one year became the "stalwart" favorite of the next, and how the cherished ambitions of men were trodden down with the relentlessness of a juggernaut, all because expediency and the smooth running of the machine demanded it. This is told by one who suffered, but who believed the chief reasoned not unkindly when fate removed him from the chessboard of politics.

This article is a chapter of the unwritten political history in Pennsylvania. It will be cited when the political mysteries of the past again come up for solution, and will stand as authority when discussions arise. No Pennsylvanian should fail to read it. It will be instructive and useful alike to the boy and the old man, and to the woman as well, for there is a great human side to the story.

A Potter County Victim of the Slocum Disaster.

Among the victims of the awful Slocum disaster in the East river, is Miss Emma Griesel, the 15 year-old daughter of Mrs. Matilda Griesel, who left Coudersport, Potter county, with her family about a year ago to make her home in New York. The entire family had become identified with the ill-fated church and Sunday school, which was well nigh destroyed in the General Slocum catastrophe.

From the Potter Enterprise it is learned that the body of the girl was found on Tuesday morning in the paddle box of the steamer, along with a number of girls who were in her confirmation class, the members of which evidently stuck together. She was taken to the morgue with about a hundred other bodies, and the only way she could be identified was by her clothing and some jewelry she wore.

The body was taken to Coudersport on a freight train on Wednesday last, and interment was made in Eulalia cemetery after the services held at the Lutheran church, which were largely attended by the many friends and relatives of the young girl, who was dearly loved by all who knew her. The remains were accompanied to Coudersport by her three brothers, Frank, Alfred and George, her mother being unable to come on account of illness, the principle cause of which was the terrible, sudden death of her daughter.

Snow Shoe's Railroad Facilities.

In referring to the new driving park soon to be built at Snow Shoe the DuBois Journal thus speaks of Snow Shoe's railroad facilities.

What will eventually prove one of the most desirable excursion and pleasure resorts in Central Pennsylvania, is just being instituted at Snow Shoe, which is one of the highest and most salubrious points in all the Allegheny regions of the section of the state.

It so happens that Snow Shoe has ample railroad connections, being on the line of the N. Y. C. & H. R. R., and the Pennsylvania railroad. While the former mentioned line is one of the finest the P. R. R., from Bellefonte to Snow Shoe is decidedly one of the most romantic railroad scenic rides that this or any other state in the Union provides. It is a switchback, or zig-zag road, up the mountain, and one of the oldest lines this side of Harrisburg. It was constructed long before the Bald Eagle line of what is now the Pennsylvania branch was ever thought of.

When the Snow Shoe railroad was built it was a venture in railroad circles which only those personally connected with it had any faith During those times what was known as the Bald Eagle Valley canal transported all the coal and other merchandise toward the sea coast. Engineers galore predicted that the Snow Shoe railroad would prove nothing but a death trap, and yet the accidents on it are not as large as those of roads on the level. Before the Bald Eagle railroad was constructed, the coal from the Snow territory was taken down the mountain over this famous road by rail and loaded on the canal boats for eastern shipment. Of course, when the Bald Eagle railroad was constructed the Snow Shoe product went to tidewater by rail without reloading.

The late Judge Daniel Rhoads, was the prime mover in this enterprise. While Judge Rhoads was a Quaker and came from Chester county to Centre, he was endowed with that determined industrial ambition which brought about the construction of this famous Snow Shoe railroad. It is the oldest connecting line of grand system of steam lines in the state today, and the town of Snow Shoe, right on top of the Alleghenies, is one of the most romantic and Indian historical points Pennsylvania possesses today.

Treat Your Kidneys for Rheumatism

When you are suffering from rheumatism, the kidneys must be attended to at once so that they will eliminate the uric acid from the blood. Foley's Kidney Cure is the most effectice remedy for this purpose. R. T. Hopkins, of Polar, Wis., says, "After unsuccessfully doctoring three years for rheumatism with the best doctor, I tried Foley's Kidney Cure and it cured me. I cannot speak too highly of this great medicine." C. M. Parrish.

Snow Shoe Driving Park Association.

The Snow Shoe Driving Park Association now being organized at Snow Shoe promises to be a great affair:

They have an option on sixteen acres of cleared land, that is under cultivation, and also eight acres of the finest wooded Park Lands in that section of the country, with pure spring water right on the grounds.

On the cleared land, they propose to build a half mile race track, stables, grand stands, etc., also one of the finest base ball grounds in the state, and enclose all this with an eight foot fence. The park, they propose to fit up as a picnic ground, and will offer inducements to picnics to go there.

This park will be located within a five mintues walk of the town of Snow Shoe, where they have excellent Railroad facilities, both on the N. Y. C. & H. R. R., and on the P. R. R., for visitors coming and going, and also have three large hotels in the town for the accommodation of visitors. They expect to advertise the picturesque ride up the Mountain side via P. R. R.

They are centrally located; and, expect to draw crowds largely from Centre, Clinton and Clearfield Counties.

Snow Shoe has long had the reputation of being an ideal summer resort, owing to the cool climate that prevails all during the summer as there is never a day during the hot season that you can not find a nice cool place to rest in.

M. D. Kelley is the Acting President and Wm. D. O'Brien, Acting Secretary of the Association. The proposed cost of the new picnic ground is $7.000.

Snow Shoe people are possessed of a whole lot of push and energy and we predict for the new driving park unbounded success.

Prohibitionists Name Swallow.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 1.—The prohibition party in national convention Thursday nominated Silas C. Swallow, of Pennsylvania, for president, and George W. Carroll, of Texas, for vice-president. The platform was adopted without argument after a long deadlock in the resolutions committee. It was described by I. H. Ames, of Oregon, secretary of the committee, as the broadest platform ever placed before the people by the party.

General Miles put an end to the movement to nominate him for president by sending to John G. Woolley a telegram from New York asking that his name be not presented. This was considered final and the movement for Mr. Swallow was unanimous, no other name being considered.

Over $16,000 was raised by subscription pledges from the floor of the convention, which, with $11,000 in the treasury, will be the nucleus of the campaign fund. National Chairman Stewart and National Secretary Tate were re-elected.

The convention wes somewhat slow in assembling and it was 9:50 o'clock Thursday morning when the delegates were called to order by A. G. Wolfenbarger, Oliver W. Stewart offered prayer, the delegates receiving it standing with heads bowed, shouts of "amen" accentuating its various periods.

Chairman Wolfenbarger called for the report of the resolutions committee. Chairman Tracy, of the committee announced that there was a majority and minority report ready, but he requested an adjournment of the convention until 1:30, in order that the committee might make another effort to agree. This was seconded by Secretary Amos, of the committee, who represented the majority report of the committee. The convention took a recess until 1:30 without either report being read, and the resolutions committee again went into sessions.

On re-assembling the committee made its report and it was adopted.

The platform deplores the "prevailing system of the licensed and legalized sale of alcoholic beverages," and denounces the "leader of the democratic and republican parties for their refusal to recognize the paramount importance of this question."

Among other things the platform says:

"Recognizing that the intelligent voters of the country may properly ask our attitude on other questions of public concern, we declare ourselves in favor of:

"A more intimate relation between the people and government by a wise adaption of the principle of initiative and referendum.

"International arbitration.

"The reform of our divorce laws, the final extirpation of polygamy and the total overthrow of the present shameful and illegal sanction of the social evil, with its unspeakable traffic in girls by the municipal authorities of almost all our cities."

At the afternoon session the platform was adopted by the convention after the minority and majority members of the resolution committee had agreed on slight verbal changes and had added the following paragraphs:

"We declare ourselves in favor of recognition of the fact that the right of suffrage should depend on the mental and moral qualifications of the citizens.

"We declare ourselves in favor of such changes in our laws as will place tariff schedules in the hands of an omnipartisan commission.

"We declare ourselves in favor of the application of uniform laws for all our country and dependencies.

"We declare ourselves in favor of the extension and honest administration of the civil service laws.

"We declare ourselves in favor of the election of United States senators by vote of the people.

"The initiative and referendum clause was loudly applauded, as were the planks favoring popular election of senators and denouncing polygamy. At the conclusion of the reading of the platform there was a prolonged demonstration. The motion to adopt the platform was carried with a great burst of applause and the demonstration lasted several minutes.

Lock Haven Wood Chopper Injured.

Joseph Dannis, of the First ward, who is employed near Port Matilda getting out pulp wood for the paper mill of this city, came home this week with a badly cut wrist. While cutting off a limb which he was holding with the left hand, the axe struck a not and glanced, cutting a gash two and one-half inches long on the back of his wrist, severing the tendons. Dr Hayes dressed the wound, drawing the muscles together and closing the wound with four stitches.—Lock Haven Democrat.

He ran over a horse with a tin can tied to his tail and the horse took freight and tore up the street knocking down a lady carrying a bucket of milk with a buggy, and broke her ankle at the corner of Fifth Street, and doing other damages besides spilling the milk which was not stopped till the mill was reached owned by Mr. Jones who was killed while walking down the street by a stroke of lightning with a fence rail on his shoulder so far back that a few of the oldest inhabitants knew of the occurrence residing in our town.

—Isaac Burd an old soldier, 65 years old with the toes and heel on his left foot frozen off and not altogether healed, walked from Mill Hall to Bellefonte on Tuesday. —The council at their regular meeting Tuesday evening decided to build a wall along South Water street similar to the one on North Water street. This movement of council should receive the hearty endorsement of the citizens of our town as it will be a permanent and lasting improvement and a credit to Bellefonte. This is a largely traveled thoroughfare leading as it does to the big Spring and the building of a substantial wall and good walk along this end of the street will be a lasting benefit worth many times what it costs.

REPUBLICANS ORGANIZING.

A Successful Movement Launched to Organize a Republican Club.

All signs point to a vigorous campaign this fall on the part of the Republican party of Bellefonte and Centre county. Especially in Bellefonte will there be something doing. A petition is now being circulated to secure signers for membership in what is to be called "The Roosevelt Republican Club of Bellefonte" Already there are many signers to the paper and when organized the club will have over 200 members on its roll. Col. Wilbur F. Reeder Chairman of the Republican County Committee is the prime mover in organizing the club and his name heads the petition.

Rooms will be secured and at an early date a permanent organization will be effected when the club will be ready for business.

It is the intention of the club to join the State League of Republican clubs and in that event a special car will be secured to convey the club to the convention of the State League of Republican clubs which meets in Reading next September.

Every Republican should add his name to the list of membership as soon as possible and show to the Republicans in other towns in the state that Bellefonte Republicans are wide awake.

Hats Off to Captain Locke.

The latest Bellefonter to achieve military honors is none other than Dr. Melvin J. Locke, who on Saturday last was appointed on the staff of Col. Rufus C. Elder of the 5th Regiment with the rank of Captain. The new appointee succeeds Boyd E Musser, of York, who has tendered his resignation

Dr. Locke informs us that he will accept the appointment and we feel sure that he will make a splendid officer. His appointment comes as a great surprise to his many friends who were not "next" to his ambition in this direction, but at the same time it will meet with general approval.

Captain Locke's first camp will be the big division camp at Gettysburg which opens about July 20. We wish him all kinds of success in this new field of usefulness
